VOLUME XXXII---NUMBER 267.

J. Ross Browne, who has arrived in Boston from the Colorado river direct, and who is thoroughly acquainted with the state of affairs in Arizona, does not believe the story of the capture of Fort Goodwin by 2000 Indians, and the massacre of the garrison. He states that there are not two thousand hostile Indians in the Territory. The Apaches are the only tribe against whom the government is now waging war, and the greatest number of warriors they could gather together would not amount to more than six or seven hundred. At this season of the year, when subsistence is so scarce, it is almost impracticable for them to continue in any large number. Two hundred in one body is a very large force at any time.

STODDARD'S CHOLERA SPECIFIC is a well-known and effective medicine. Its testimonials are from our own citizens, men whom we all know, and who occupy the higher walks of life. It is no patent nostrum, got up at this time to feed upon the fears and cupidity of the public. It has stood the test of time, and been productive of the happiest results. All who have occupied its use, without hesitation whatever in commanding its use, and in advising all families to employ its agency for the cure of the diseases for which it is specially recommended. The remedy is otherwise well known, was used so successfully at Constantinople by Missionary Hamlin during the rage of cholera there, and also in New York during the cholera season of 1849. Its merits have been published on the label of each bottle. All who occupy the higher walks of life, exactly what they are taking, and in this respect, as well as in its happy effects upon the patient, it is unlike nearly every other advertised medicine extant. Messrs. Stoddard & Burton, proprietors of the Specific, are well known in this city and vicinity as honorable dealers, who would not attempt to impose upon the public an article unworthy their name. Besides the Cholera Specific already enjoys the benefit of at least ten years' trial, and has secured the highest commendations among those who know the manufacturers. The Specific is carefully prepared, and has no deleterious ingredients are used. We feel perfectly safe in recommending the article in all cases for which it is claimed to be a specific.—[Troy Daily Times.

ERIE RAILWAY. We learn the day express trains on this railway have been recently furnished with a new set of coaches, smoking and baggage cars, which are said to be far ahead of anything heretofore in use, and will make the journey from Buffalo's shops, are 67 feet in length, supported on six-wheeled trucks, and will seat comfortably 80 passengers. They have been fitted up without regard to expense, and the improvement has been made in accordance with the latest improvements in the construction of the backs of the seats, being so arranged as to fit every portion of the back like an easy chair, is a very desirable one; while special plans have been adopted for the comfort of the passenger, and support for the foot. Miller's Platform, with his patent Self-Compler and Buffer; has also been adopted, by which the platforms are brought close together, thereby avoiding the jolting and wrenching usually experienced in stopping and starting trains, and forming a perfectly smooth and safe passage way from one coach to another. Beside these advantages, it is claimed, that this kind of rolling stock is better adapted for the street drive with the pills of the coaches, prevents the possibility of one coach telescoping, as it is termed, into another, in case of collision, and renders the train much more comfortable. The smoking cars are furnished with canopied revolving chairs, and at one end a news stand has been erected where all the current literature, as well as a good cigar, and refreshments are being sold. In this respect, the Erie is being done far in front, by the managers of this great thoroughfare, and at the same time enjoy the magnificent scenery abounding everywhere on this line of railway. It is known the management of the Erie is taken with the interest in the completion of the Buxton, Hartford and Erie Railroad, which may one of these days as a broad gauge line direct from Buxton. At present, travellers can reach the Atlantic either via the rail line, or the magnificent Steam steamer, which connect morning and evening with express trains for the West. Mr. John S. Dunlap, at 15 State Street, is the popular and efficient New England agent of the Erie Railway Company. [Boston Traveller, 9th.

NICHOLS HOUSE.

International Steamship Co
BASTPORT, CALAIS & ST. JOHN.PORTLAND & KENNEBEC RAILROAD
Lower Kennebec Route.AN APRIL FOOL.

A regular-built, greenhorn, this young chap, named Charles Eastport, and he'll go poking round the neighborhood looking for that girl like a needle in one of his father's haystacks. Big thing for the first of April, isn't it?

As it happened, however, Ira knew the home in which the girl lived. He had seen her go in or out of the tall tenement building three or four times, and as her manner was uncommonly modest, and she looked so very sad, his interest had been just sufficiently awakened to enable him to recall the place now he had occasion.

But in that building, with its single entrance door in front, there were perhaps a score of different households—perhaps more than a score; and if he had entered it, he knew not which of these doors to knock at, in order to find this particular young woman. So when he reached the building, he posted himself on the opposite side of the street, and looked on at the dizzy rows of stories of brick and window, in the hope that he might catch a glimpse of the face he wanted. If he failed to see, Ira had a dim notion that he would go through the house and rap at every door till he found the right one.

While he stood there he became conscious that he was again an object of interest to that same boy of urbane who had frightened him away from the package in the morning. They were, it was plain from their gestures, relating the sportive incident of the morning to a new comers, an older boy, clearly a boot-black by profession, and a bulky amongst these young men. Presently the boot-black came out, with the peculiar drawl of his tribe:

"Haw! who did? Who hollowed April Fool at her? I'll which 'em in de snout for it! Who hollowed at her?"

Ira caught this up quickly. He went over to the boys.

"You know that girl who was going to pick up that package this morning just before I picked it up?"

"Yes, said the boot-black; 'you bet I know'er. Didn't she give me some bully soap when I had the fever? I'll which any fellow who hollows at her.'"

"That's your sort!" said Ira diplomatically, patting the boy on the shoulder; "but just show me to her door, will you? I've got something for her."

"Well, I dunno," said the boy, looking Ira over with a precociously knowing squint, and seeming to hesitate. "For a stranger to me, mister—But, the evening added, I guess yer ain't in it, nuther—I don't mind! The young lady ain't home, though."

"No! She's out some time, day-times, an' stays home nights. Comin' round to night, 'bout seven o'clock, I'll be here waiting for her. This conversation took place in the doorway of the tenement building in question; and Mr. Strutt, our hero's fellow-boarder, who had been sitting in the corner of the street on his way to dinner.

"I saw you in the doorway of a mansion in an adjoining street to-day," Mr. Hart, said, sitting at the dinner-table, twinkling to his friends as much as to say, he had a capital thing on the young man from the country now, and had been calling on some friends or relatives there!"

"What do you mean?" said Ira, blushing violently, as he was finally come to do when directly addressed in the presence of all these elegantly conducted ladies and gentlemen at Mrs. M. Packers.

"I mean the tenement house in—Street, where I saw you a few minutes ago," said Strutt, smiling benignly at the startled guest.

"No," said Ira, eating his dinner industriously.

"Ah, only friends!" persisted his tormentor.

"No there's nobody there I know in particular," said Ira blushing deeply.

"Then, Mrs. M. Packers, said Strutt, laying down his knife and fork with much solemnity, and addressing the majestic lady at the head of the table, "I fear you are about to lose a fellow-boarder. I suspect Mr. Hart is looking for apartments elsewhere."

"At this surprising scintillation of wit a titter ran round the table at Mr. Hart's expense."

"It's none of your business what I was doing there," said Ira, with sudden energy that drove the blood all out of the dandy bachelor's face with a flush, but since you've made me blush before all these people, when I've really nothing to blush at, I'll tell the whole story."

Whereupon Ira related his April Fool adventure, and how he was going to see the girl to night, and give her the money that belonged to her.

"Mr. Strutt was in ecstasies over the story; it was the most refreshing thing he had heard of, of his kind, really, customers and lettuce wouldn't be a circumstance to it; he ceased on the instant to eat in rapid succession."

Somewhat Mr. Strutt's speech did not meet with their usual success on this occasion. The majority of the boarders were positively touched with respect for this young man's remarkable readiness; there was an odor of fresh, natural simplicity about it by no means disagreeable.

After tea that evening Ira went around the street, and found the little boot-black practicing his dinky breakdown in front of the tenement house.

"I told Miss Harvey you was comin' said the boy; and she said I was her brother's brother."

"No," said Ira, "I'm not her brother, and he thought of me as Mr. Strutt's witless son of a relative."

Ira had never seen, poverty like that which met his gaze on being ushered into the room where Miss Harvey lived; together with her invalid mother, his afterwards appeared. There is a much in this world, but he had never seen so bad enough in all conscience. No carpet on the floor; no curtains to the windows; no picture or ornament, even the cheapest, to relieve the barren aspect of the walls; and all the furniture in the room was a bed, a chair, a table and a little stove. There was a cupboard which let into the wall, and as the door stood ajar, Ira saw a meagre collection of dishes—his dozen, perhaps—and cooking utensils. But cleanliness was everywhere.

The girl had met our hero with a face full of inquiry, and placed the only chair for him, saying in a whisper:

"Please to sit down, sir; and please don't wake up mother by speaking very loud."

This referred to a thin, white-faced woman, who lay on the bed, evidently far gone with consumption.

Ira looked about him with this deposit upon his poor girl's dire poverty. It seemed to him almost like looking on her bare foot—necessary exposure which he had up to his eyes in.

"I—I didn't know you was so poor," stammered Ira; there's some money belongs to you, and he handed her the ten dollars.

"No," said the girl, looking with strange eagerness at the money; "it's some mistake. It does not belong to me."

"Oh, but you don't understand," said Ira. And then he explained what the reader already knows.

Change in Livery Stock

Having disposed of my interest in the LIVERY STOCK in the Main Street Stable formerly occupied by Olen Billings, I would have that I have a CHOICE LIVERY STOCK.

At my old stand in the Bangor road, I have a choice of LIVERY STOCK, and I am happy to have a new lot of horses and drivers.

All orders left at the Bangor House for Coachman, Hark or Driver, will be promptly attended to.

Referring to the annual statement of the Company and the dividend of $2,975,000 declared February 1, 1866, we present herewith some illustrations of the system by which it was allotted to policy holders.

The Company recognizes the principle that AMPLY SECURITY is a paramount consideration in Life Insurance, and neither in form or amount will any dividend be declared incompatible with that principle.

In addition to the proper reserve for re-insurance of outstanding risks, there still remains an undivided surplus of $1,200,000.

Dividends will be declared annually hereafter, and may be used either to purchase more insurance, in reduction of premiums, or on "paid up" policies, they may be drawn in cash on the date of each policy in any year.

The annual dividends on these policies exceed the annual premiums. So that a policy holder, by applying his dividends to the payment of future premiums, not only avoids all further outlay, but his policy annually increases in amount.

The dividends on policies of a more recent date, including those issued last year, may be applied in like manner to the full extent of their accumulations.

Insurers who do not thus apply their dividends, have the full benefit of the large additions to their policies, as shown in the above table, and pay, at any future period, use such portions of their dividends in the payment of any one or more premiums as they may desire.

It will be noticed as a peculiarity of our system, that while the dividends are moderate at the beginning, as all dividends must be which are declared upon just and equitable principles, yet they rapidly increase each year as the policy grows older, so that eventually the insurance becomes paid up in full.

Endowment Policies.

Payable either at death or to the persons insured, on their arriving at specified ages. This favorite form of insurance or investment is of a more recent date, and the following examples will suffice to show their results thus far in the MUTUAL LIFE:

| No. of Policy. | When issued.  | Age at Issue. | Amount. | Term.     | Premium. | Prem. now paid. | Total Premium. | Dividend.  | Amount paid. |
|----------------|---------------|---------------|---------|-----------|----------|-----------------|----------------|------------|--------------|
| 19,949         | Mar. 11, 1858 | 42            | $5000  | Pay at 50 | $622 87 | A.              | $1,982 26     | $1,602 59 | $3602 59    |
| 17,826         | Jan. 18, 1857 | 51            | 6000    | " 60      | 263 41   | B.              | 4,987 97       | 1,837 01   | 6824 01      |
| 18,906         | July 1, "     | 47            | 2000    | " 55      | 129 09   | C.              | 2,065 44       | 662 80     | 2662 80      |
| 18,153         | Feb. 20, "    | 36            | 6000    | " 45      | 541 80   | A.              | 4,871 70       | 1,711 97   | 6583 67      |

All of the above policies have been paid to the owners, and it will be seen that they receive a surplus above all they have paid to the Company, with compound interest at six per cent., and no charge whatever for expenses or cost of insurance meanwhile.

NICHOLS HOUSE.

The undersigned having leased, for a long term, and thoroughly renovated and refitted the Nichols House (the "Dorset House" in Bangor), has this day re-opened the same to the public accommodation.

This Hotel is centrally located, and in close proximity with the Bona and Cans.

The Proprietor, who has a long experience in the Hotel business, and who has secured the services of a first-class chef, and a first-class waiter, is prepared to furnish the public with a comfortable and pleasant stay.

Every effort and expense will be used to make this House as popular and attractive as any in this section of the State. Having lately purchased the large and enterprising

Livery Establishment

Lately owned by CALER BILLINGS, Esq., the same will be carried on in all its departments in connection with the Hotel, and the undersigned will be ready to furnish teams of all descriptions, and to extend all accommodations to those who may favor him with their calls.

Stages leave this House daily for all parts of the country.

Orders may be left at the House, or at the stable office, where a reliable man will be ready to attend upon the wants of customers.
